

BLACKFOOT'S BOLD HOLDUP

Robber Stops Victims Near the Sheriff's Residence and the County Jail—Makes His Escape on Train—Pocatello Officers on the Trail

Blackfoot, Ida., Aug. 20.—At 9 o'clock last night, within a stone's throw of the sheriff's office and within a block of his residence, occurred one of the most daring holdups in the history of this quiet town.

George E. Campbell, an aged pioneer miner, was returning to his home on Judicial street, after an evening spent down town. As he passed the alley east of Mrs. Wood's residence, a masked man with a gun stepped out of the alley and commanded him to halt. The robber's appearance was so quiet and he made so little fuss that Mr. Campbell was not disposed to take the situation seriously. But when the command was repeated and the gun thrust into his stomach, Mr. Campbell threw up his hands. The robber secured about $16 from Mr. Campbell, but declined to take his watch.

James Adamson, a young man, also on his way home, was but half a block away at the time, but did not seem to realize the situation. He, too, was held up by the robber, but since he had but 25 cents his cash was returned and he was told to pass on.

Upon reaching home, Mr. Campbell at once called upon the sheriff and notified him of his loss. Sheriff Jones and Marshal Simons made a search for the robber, but failed to locate anyone until just as the Yellowstone special was pulling out, when a man made a dash for the rear platform. The officers at Pocatello were at once notified by telephone. They stopped the train outside the city and made a search for the man, who made his escape after several shots had been fired at him.

FATHER CURRAN DIES IN SALT LAKE

Salt Lake, Aug. 21.—Father Michael Curran, for several years priest in the local diocese for the Roman Catholic church, having charge of St. Patrick's church, died at 11 o'clock yesterday morning at Judge Mercy hospital. Death was due to general debility, the beloved priest having been gradually sinking for several days.

Father Curran was born in County Galway, Ireland, 70 years ago. He was educated at Maynooth college and was ordained to the priesthood 46 years ago. His first charge was the pastorate of a parish in his home county, Galway. Later he was transferred to the famous Grotto of Knock, where he remained six years. The Grotto of Knock is as famous for its cures as Lourdes in France.

Father Curran came to America after leaving the Grotto church. His first mission in this country was at Evanston, Wyoming, under Bishop Maurice Burke, now of St. Joseph, Missouri. Seventeen years ago he came to Salt Lake City. Almost immediately he was appointed pastor of St. Patrick's parish in this city and he has since been in charge ever since. It would be impossible to tell the number of warm friends Father Curran has made during his long residence here. It is also needless to say that his mourners will number hundreds and there will be many to whom he has been a benefactor who will feel deeply the bereavement that has come to them.

Funeral services will be held for the Rev. Father Curran Friday, although all the details have not yet been arranged, nor has the place of interment been decided upon. Both will be announced later.

The solemn pontifical mass of requiem will be celebrated at 10 o'clock Friday morning by the Right Rev. Bishop Scanlan, assisted by the clergy of St. Patrick's. The funeral service will be delivered by the Rev. W. K. Ryan.

The body will lie in state this afternoon in the cathedral from 4 to 9 o'clock and tomorrow morning from 6 o'clock until after the services.

The Gregorian mass of requiem will be sung by the cathedral choir tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The members of the cathedral choir will meet at the cathedral tonight at 6 o'clock to rehearse the requiem mass which will be sung at the funeral services. All members and past members of the choir are requested to attend the rehearsal.

LIQUOR FOUND IN DRY TERRITORY

Pocatello, Idaho, Aug. 20.—A search for Captain Kidd's treasure was never made with greater zeal than the searches made by the sheriff's force of Bannock county for contraband liquor. Last night Sheriff E. E. Lowrey and two of his deputies, George Crane and "Bob" Lewis, "located" a valuable supply cached under pumpkin vines in the northeastern part of the city. The liquor was peddled by a Greek who had been under suspicion for some time and the valuable find by the officers led to his arrest. Today Judge Knowlton released him on a $500 cash bond.

A few nights ago sixty-five "sacks" of whiskey were discovered by the sheriff's force out at the old Perkins ranch northeast of town. It was necessary to make five trips with an automobile to bring all the liquor to the sheriff's office. As yet no one has appeared to claim the liquor and the officers have been unable to locate the owners. The place where the liquor was stored was a search warrant which had been issued by the proper authorities. There was no one on whom to serve the warrant but the officers considering this could not defeat the search as long as the place was accurately described in the warrant, proceeded to get the beverage in a place where it would be likely to do less harm to its keepers. Following the confiscation of this cache of whisky anonymous threats were made to the sheriff of possible civil actions against him, but he feels that he acted wholly within his rights.

Today before Justice of the Peace Knowles appeared Tommy Frust, accused of transporting an intoxicating liquor from a "wet" into a "dry" territory. Frust is a news agent on a train from Boise to Pocatello, and while at Boise, it is alleged, loaded two suit cases with whisky to dispose of when he reached Pocatello. He was apprehended by the officers on his arrival and his arrest followed. He was bound over to the district court in bonds of $1000.

AVIATOR MAY FLY AT BRIGHAM

Brigham City, Aug. 20.—N. C. Simonsen, one of the managers for Peach day this year, spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Salt Lake City making arrangements for certain attractions for the celebration. Mr. Simonsen is endeavoring to make a contract with the aviator who will fly in Salt Lake during the carnival of the Wizard of the Wasatch, to make a flight in Brigham City on September 17. Another matter that is under consideration by Mr. Simonsen is the procuring of a three days stopover by the Bamberger Railroad company. This matter has practically been assured.

Numerous miniature balloons, to the number of perhaps twenty, will be sent up into the air at different intervals during the day. Amusing features will connect with the balloon ascensions and the feature will likely prove attractive.

Brigham City has been asked to make a showing in the parade of the Wizard of the Wasatch in Salt Lake the latter part of August, and the matter was referred to the Peach day committee. This committee has plans under way for an elaborate float representing this city from a horticultural view. Among the features of the float will be a peach tree fresh from one of the prosperous orchards here, laden with luscious peaches. The floats will also contain samples of other important varieties of fruits grown here.

CAPTURE RUNAWAY BOY ON A SHIP

San Francisco, Aug. 20.—Emanuel Teer, a runaway boy slightly under 17 years old, was taken from the steamer Tahiti this morning by Sergeant of Police John Moffitt a few minutes before the vessel sailed for the Orient. Teer had shipped as a cabin boy on the steamer and cried bitterly when taken into custody.

Chief of Police White had been requested to keep a lookout for the boy by Sheriff Andrew Smith, Jr., of Salt Lake County, Utah, who said the lad had run away on July 30 from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Teer, residing in Salt Lake City.

Young Teer told the police that his parents and himself were all on the way to Australia where his two brothers reside, and are in business, and that his father gave him money to come to San Francisco and depart for Australia from this port. He said he had spent all his money and had been compelled to work at odd jobs while stranded in this city. The boy was detained at the city prison and the sheriff of Salt Lake county was notified by telegraph of his detention.

Salt Lake, Aug. 21.—Sheriff Andrew Smith, Jr., received a telegram last night telling of the detention of Teer. The young man left Salt Lake about the first of the month with the intention, it was thought, of going to Australia, where he has two brothers living, and to the contract. He came here from Australia about a year ago with his parents. The father, James Teer, a plasterer, appealed to Sheriff Smith for help in finding the boy and it was through the efforts of the sheriff that he was prevented from leaving the United States.

When Sheriff Smith visited the Teer home on Twenty-third street, below Twelfth South street, last night, he found no one at home and could not deliver the message that the boy had been found.

MAY SETTLE SHORTAGE

Brigham, Aug. 20.—It was unofficially stated here tonight that the shortage in the accounts of R. K. Hardy, former ticket agent for the Denver & Rio Grande road here, would probably be made up under case against him dropped. Hardy suddenly disappeared about ten days ago, leaving a shortage in his accounts, upon which the road's examiners are working, said to approximate $500.

CONDEMNING THE MIDLAND

Denver, Colo., Aug. 20.—The Denver Motor club condemned the Midland trail through Utah and urged that a shorter and better route be found by engineers through northwestern Colorado and the Uinta basin in Utah.

The Midland trail is impracticable, and the Utah authorities are not in favor of it," declared E. E. Sommers, president of the Motor club, when he brought up the subject. "Most people in the east are in favor of the Overland trail, but Colorado will not be left off the Lincoln memorial highway, for the Denver Motor club, with the aid of the people living along the new route, will get it."

Arrangements for the engineering inspection of the Grand Lake-Meckler-Vernal route have been completed by the Motor club and the engineers will begin work in a few days. Thorough data concerning the highway and its qualifications as a link in the coast-to-coast route will be prepared and presented to the National Highway association.

GIRL ACCUSES MAN OF ASSAULT

Salt Lake, Aug. 21.—According to statements made last night by Miss Irene Horspool, 16 years of age, she was the victim yesterday morning of an attack by a man who was delivering a dress which had been cleaned for a member of the family. Miss Horspool is the daughter of F. L. Horspool, 677 South Fifth East street. The girl said last night that her assailant choked her and that further mistreatment at his hands was prevented by the timely arrival of Harold Osborne, a delivery boy for a nearby grocery, who was carrying a sack of flour which had been ordered by her mother.

F. Guyon, 23 years of age, was arrested at his home, 19 Washington court, shortly before midnight last night, and later identified by the girl as her assailant. Guyon was traced to his home by Detectives George E. Cleveland, E. H. Seeger, and Moroni Gillespie who made the arrest. The detectives, together with Patrolman A. C. Husbands, drove to within half a block of the place in an automobile and then, making a quick, silent run on foot, surrounded the place. Guyon was found in bed. He was told to dress himself, but according to the officers, took a great deal more time to do so than the really necessary, looking toward the back door and windows as if for a way of escape.

Guyon admitted to the detectives that he was at the home of the girl yesterday and that he attempted to kiss her, but denied any worse intent or display of roughness. When he was taken before her last night, she quickly recognized him, and the journey to police headquarters was completed by the prisoner and his captors.

"This is the first time I was ever brought in here," said Guyon as he was asked for his name and age by Desk Sergeant William Keyting. He was booked on an open charge, but it is understood that the detectives who made the arrest will ask for a complaint today.

According to the story told last night by the Horspool girl, she was alone and had just eaten a late breakfast when the cleaning agent knocked at the rear door. She accepted the dress and paid the man, who left the house. Five minutes later, according to her story, the man returned and asked for a drink of water. She admitted him to the kitchen, and as she handed him a tumbler filled with water, the man seized her wrist and, holding his hand over her mouth, dragged her to the next room and choked her.

At this minute, the delivery boy employed at the C. S. Schlaugter grocery store at Seventh South and Fifth East street, called at the kitchen with a sack of flour.

"If you say anything to that delivery boy I will kill you," is what the girl says the man said to her. Half fainting, she accepted the sack of flour. She tried to speak, but could not utter a word, so badly was her throat injured. When the delivery boy had gone, the Horspool girl's assailant left, saying he wanted to telephone at the grocery store nearby. She hastily called to a neighbor to of the range, where it is lost under the material of the foothills. On the west side of the range, and in line with this fissure, is the bed of Box Elder lake, which is a basin like depression in the level valley close to the foothills. This bowl like depression no doubt was caused by the subsidence of the hanging wall side of the fissure.

It is in this bowl like depression that the waters, carrying the solution of carbonate of lime, found a quiet resting place and finally deposited.

The area of this deposit of carbonate of lime is 2140 acres with almost a uniform depth of ten feet overlying the clay beneath. With such a vast quantity of the lime element taken away from the limestone measures in the mountains on the east, those limestone measures were left with large and small caves or openings and also with an extensive zone of brecciated or broken material on the hanging wall side of the fissure, which condition allowed ore solutions to force their way up and fill those openings with lead and iron ores, carrying some gold and silver.

Starting from a point four and one-half miles north of Brigham City, Box Elder county, Utah, at an altitude of 4300 feet above sea level on the county road, Gibbs Canyon is seen on the east debouching into the Great Salt Lake basin, from the western slope of the Wasatch range of mountains.

The Wasatch range of mountains which extends in a west to north direction from below Salt Lake City to a considerable distance above Gibbs canyon, consists of a base of granitic rocks which by their upheaval have exposed the upturned edges of the sedimentaries above them.

In the uplifts of the strata, they have been much folded in a direction transverse to the uplift, and deep seated fractures have resulted.

In ascending Gibbs canyon, the detrital matter, caused by atmospheric, aqueous and other natural agencies, is first passed over, then over the upturned edges of succeeding strata of lime, slate and quartzite, until the summit of the range is reached.

In Gibbs canyon one of the greatest dislocations, so far noticed in the range, has occurred, which, instead of manifesting itself in a fold, took the form of a faulting fissure, which traverses the canyon, from its mouth to the summit, and on the south side, cutting across the strata at right angles, or nearly so, and across the canyon near the summit diagonally.

To the north of this fissure, the strata have been upheaved vertically more than 200 feet, on the foot wall side of the fissure, which has a dip of 50 degrees to the southeast.

In this canyon, owing to the faulting fissure, there would, at first sight, appear to be two quartzites, but, upon casual examination, it is found that the upper one suddenly stops at the footwall of the fissure on the north, and does not overlie the lower one, the south, the lower one extending to the south from the hanging wall of the fissure, and beginning at a point nearly directly under the end of the upper one, but does not underlie the upper one to the north.

All of the other strata have in like manner been broken, and those lying to the north pushed past those lying to the south an equal distance. The appearance of the formations may be illustrated as follows:

Take a square stick of candy, with different layers of various colors, and of some length; break this stick in half, and place a book under one-half, and let the other half remain on the table. Every layer in one-half would be just the thickness of the book higher than the layer, the stick it belonged, and is on the table. The case is exactly the same in Gibbs canyon, only the book, in that case, is 200 feet thick, and the layers of candy are the strata of rock.

The foregoing describes what is known as the "north break," being actually a fissure. Referring to the candy illustration again, take the pieces of candy and break into three pieces, let the middle piece remain on the table, and place a book under each of the two outer pieces. As you view it the crack or fissure to your left, would represent the "north break" and the crack or fissure on your right would represent what is known as the "south break."

In brief, the two fissures, in their direction of strike, to the west, approach each other, and no doubt at some point merge into one fissure. The distance between the north and the south break is 2200 feet at a point near the summit of the range.

There has been more than 6000 feet of work done on these fissures, and drifts and crosscuts run into the lime and lead ores in the lime, carrying gold and silver values, have been encountered, in quantities, and, while of low grade, can be mined and shipped at a profit. High grade lead ores have been shipped in carload lots carrying 60 per cent in lead, $7.00 in gold and from four to six ounces in silver. The largest deposits, however, upon which dependence for continuous shipments can be relied upon carry from 12 to 18 per cent lead with 3 to 8 ounces in silver, 35 per cent iron and 24 per cent lime, making an ideal fluxing ore much in demand by smelters. At a point 2330 feet in Tunnel "A" a six-foot vein on carbonate of iron has been developed, carrying 46 per cent metallic iron, $2.00 in gold and 2 per cent lead, which is also a desirable flux.

The property of the Mineral Ridge Mining company of which Mr. Baker is president and general manager, has equipped its property with an aerial wire cable tramway, which has its upper or loading terminal at the entrance of Tunnel "A," and its lower or unloading terminal in the valley west of the mines. It is contemplated to extend the tramway to ore bunkers to be placed at Baker's spur on the Oregon Short Line railroad; which will make the total length of the line 9900 feet, with a gravity fall, or altitude difference of 2500 feet, allowing the ore to be transported direct from the tunnel to the railroad at a low cost.
